GAIDA - Expert Validation (Section A)

Rating sheet: label scheme and inter-expert agreement

AI-based Anxiety Detection System · College Guidance · University of the East

Purpose. GAIDA sorts each student message into one of five distress categories using rules plus machine-learned models. Below are 100 real student messages (verbatim, de-identified) collected during pilot use of the system. We ask a licensed mental health professional to independently label the sample to confirm the category scheme is clinically sound and to measure agreement between raters.

How to answer. Label the message shown in bold by putting a check in the box of the ONE label you judge as the closest match. The italic column paraphrases what the conversation is about (from the student's earlier messages in the same chat) so that short replies such as "True true" or "4 years" can be judged in flow. Work from the wording alone; do not discuss items with the other rater until both sheets are submitted. If a message stays unclassifiable even with its context (pure filler), mark it neutral. Time: ~25-40 minutes. Items: 100.

Note on grief and loss. Messages about grief, breakups, or loss (e.g. death in the family, end of a relationship) belong to sadness in this five-class scheme. GAIDA routes those detections to its separate loss/grief protocol - never the anxiety ladder - after detection, so choosing sadness here is the clinically correct answer.

Confidentiality. These items are real student messages quoted verbatim from pilot conversations and have been de-identified - no names, student IDs, or timestamps appear in this document or in its file properties. Some reference distress including indirect self-harm. Responses are compared anonymously for research use only and must not be photographed, copied, or shared.

Label Definitions

anxiety - nervousness, worry, tension, dread, panic-like feelings, overthinking. e.g. "my heart is racing and I can't calm down"

sadness - low mood, grief, loneliness, emptiness, crying. e.g. "I've been crying all day and I can't stop"

neutral - casual or everyday statements with no significant distress. e.g. "I passed my math exam"

suicidal - death wishes, wanting to end one's life, self-harm - even when phrased indirectly. e.g. "I want to kill myself"

anger - irritation, frustration, hostility. e.g. "I'm so angry my blood is boiling"
