GAIDA - Training Data Label Audit (Section B)

Verifying the annotations the classifier learned from

AI-based Anxiety Detection System · College Guidance · University of the East

Purpose. Below are 90 rows that were actually used to train GAIDA's intent classifier. For each row our current label is shown. We ask a licensed mental health professional to confirm the label is clinically correct, or supply the correction. This validates the dataset itself, not new messages. This is a balanced audit sample (18 per class, 20% each); it is not the training distribution.

How to answer. Check Agree if our label is correct; if it is not, write the corrected label in the last column. Time: ~10-15 minutes. Items: 90.

Confidentiality. These items are real student messages quoted verbatim from pilot conversations and have been de-identified - no names, student IDs, or timestamps appear in this document or in its file properties. Some reference distress including indirect self-harm. Responses are compared anonymously for research use only and must not be photographed, copied, or shared.

Label Definitions

anxiety - nervousness, worry, tension, dread, panic-like feelings, overthinking

sadness - low mood, grief, loneliness, emptiness, crying neutral - casual or everyday statements with no significant distress suicidal - death wishes, wanting to end one's life, self-harm - even when phrased indirectly anger - irritation, frustration, hostility
